The ladies and gentlemen who attended the St. Louis excursion, returned home last Wednesday evening, all highly pleased with the trip. It was really a reunion of the Blue and Gray upon the field, where many of those present fought upon opposing sides for a cause in which either side claimed the right. However on this second meeting on that sanguinary field, the old prejudices were forgotten, and the old veterans of both sides met only in fraternal intercourse and togetherness, as they went over the scenes of that dreadful conflict only to cement their friendships more closely.

It is said that the Government has secured an option on the ground over which the battle of Shiloh was fought, and as soon as the deal is closed, it will be turned into a national park, and maintained at Government expense. The graves of those who fell on the Union side will be kept, but those of the Confederates have been neglected. This, however, will be altered as soon as the Government assumes control of the property.

Our excursions brought back with them many relics from battlefield.
